Title: Research Presentation and Dissemination

Rationale and Overview of the Workshop

Dissemination refers to “a planned process that involves consideration of target audiences and the settings in which research findings are to be received and, where appropriate, communicating and interacting with wider policy and…service audiences in ways that will facilitate research uptake in decision-making processes and practice”1.

The final MURPH workshop will focus on research dissemination through poster presentations. You will have the opportunity to not only share your research with your peers but also give and receive feedback to create stellar research posters for the upcoming conferences. Your team will create your research poster. Your posters will be set up around the room for concurrent poster viewing. Your MURPH peers, Dr. Forssman, Natasha, and Negin will act like adjudicators view each poster and provide feedback.

Learning Outcomes:

1) Employ best practices for effectively communicating within the research community and with industry.
2) Practice giving and receiving peer feedback.
